

IRISH PRESSINGS

IRISH PRESSINGS LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

www.irishpressings.com

Irish Pressings has launched their new website. The company designs and manufactures prototypes, press tools and pressed metal components for a various range of industries.

The company which was established in 2005 began producing pressed metal products for the construction industry but the intention was always to break into the automotive market supplying pressings, prototypes and tooling. The company have achieved success in this goal and now have a number of Tier 1 and Tier 2 customers located throughout Europe.

The new website was developed as part of Irish Pressings marketing plan.

Declan Ward, Managing Director of Irish Pressings said, "The range of services we offer to customers has developed so much over the last two years and we needed our website to reflect our capabilities and provide potential customers with up to date information on exactly what Irish Pressings can do for them."

Irish Pressings can work with a customer on all stages of their project, from initial design to project completion, while at all times ensuring cost efficiencies for the customer wherever possible.

"We want to continue growing as a company in the way we have done in the last two years and our main aim now is to increase customer awareness and let potential customers know what we can do for them as well as providing our existing customers with a better, more visually appealing site with an increased amount of information," continued Declan Ward.

You can see exactly what Irish Pressings can do for you by visiting www.irishpressings.com.